

RESEARCH SCHOOL FOR POLITICAL HISTORY (RSPH) | ONDERZOEKSCHOOL POLITIEKE GESCHIEDENIS (OPG)

RMA training program 2024-2025

Version date: 20 September 2024

Table of Contents RMA Training Program

Introduction.....	1
How to register.....	2
Credits and certificates	2
Opening of the Academic Year 2024-2025	2
Program schedule.....	3
Course descriptions	4
C.1 What is Political History	4
C.2 Back to the Source	5
C.3 Summer School	6
Mission Statement RSPH.....	7

RESEARCH SCHOOL FOR POLITICAL HISTORY (RSPH) | ONDERZOEKSCHOOL POLITIEKE GESCHIEDENIS (OPG)

RMA training program 2024-2025

Version date: 20 September 2024

Introduction

The Research School for Political History (RSPH) aims to offer research master students in the history of politics and the political a high-quality training program supervised by some of the leading scholars in the field, working in the Low Countries.

The RSPH training program is open to all students enrolled in a research master in history at a Dutch university. Our courses are designed to complement and deepen the research master study program, focusing on the historiographical, thematic, conceptual and methodological aspects of political history.

The RSPH program brings you into contact with fellow research master students at other universities, with PhDs, junior and with senior researchers in the field of political history. It offers an excellent preparation if you are interested in writing a PhD dissertation and pursuing a career in political history.

The program of the RSPH for Research Master Students offers training in the following competencies:

- Knowledge of, and reflection on the current state and future of political history
- Knowledge of current debates, theories, historiography and methodologies in political history and adjacent fields of research.
- Reflection on the position and characteristics of political history in interdisciplinary research cooperation.
- Methods and techniques of research in political history.
- Oral and written reporting and participation in academic, political and public debates.
- Skills in the use of heuristic tools and techniques as well as digital humanities.

This document contains all the necessary information about the courses on offer and how to register.

In addition to our RMA training program, research master students are warmly invited to take part in other activities organized by or in close cooperation with the RSPH, e.g. master classes, seminars and conferences. Stay informed of our activities by visiting our website or subscribing to our newsletter.

Come and join us!

How to register?

The RSPH program is open to all students enrolled in a research master history programs at a Dutch university. Students need to register for the RSPH at the beginning of their research master program via the program director of their own Research Master program (who has to submit the names of registered students at the beginning of the academic year).

As registered student at the RSPH, we expect you to follow an individual program of 10 ECTS in total. If for any reason you wish to earn more (or less) credits, a specific arrangement can be made in consultation with the director of studies of the RSPH.

More details about the registration process will be made available later. If you already know which courses you wish to participate in, you can inform us via bureau@onderzoekschoolpolitiegegeschiedenis.nl.

Credits and certificates

At the end of each course / summer school, participants will receive a certificate, specifying grades and credits that have been obtained. The courses have a basic study load of 5 ECTS, with a possible extension to 6 ECTS or reduction to 3 ECTS. Please indicate upon registration how much credit points you wish to obtain for each course / summer school. The requirements for the final assignments will be expanded accordingly.

By way of exception, an additional credit point can be earned by actively participating in and writing a report about a platform activity of the RSPH (e.g. the opening, a seminar, master class or conference). Reports can be published in our newsletter. In case you would like to contribute please send us a reasoned proposal via bureau@onderzoekschoolpolitiegegeschiedenis.nl.

When people (think they) have a choice.

Opening of the Academic year 2024

Plenary meeting with keynote lectures

Date	20 September 2024
Location	Allard Pierson, Amsterdam
Time	14.30 – 17.30 Plenary meeting

The beginning of a new academic year is marked by the annual opening event. The theme of this year's opening is When people (think they) have a choice, with keynotes from Peter van Dam (University of Amsterdam), Bram Mellink (University of Amsterdam) and Chaja Merk (Milieudefensie).

Since the opening offers a sneak preview of the summer school scheduled at the end of the academic year, all research masters are encouraged to attend.

Program schedule

Courses		Period	ECTS (optional)
c.1	What is Political History Today?	Feb-March 2025	5 (6)
c.2	Back to the source. Archival Research in the Digital Age	Apr-May 2025	5 (3)
c.3	Summer school 'When people (think they) have a choice.' From articulation to mobilisation.	June-July 2025	5 (3)
Optional: active participation in a RSPH platform activity such as a workshop Nodegoat, course Oral History, and a workshop audiovisual media and digital methods (1 EC; max. of 3 EC, see PhD training program)

Course descriptions

C.1 What is Political History Today?

Supervisors: dr. Dries Raeymaekers and dr. Adriejan van Veen (Radboud University Nijmegen)

Course period: February-March 2025 (week 5-10, exact dates TBA) | 6 meetings

Location: Radboud University Nijmegen

Credits: 5 ECTS (6 is optional)

Registration: before 15 October 2024 (bureau@onderzoekschoolpolitiekegeschiedenis.nl)

Course description and learning goals

What is political history today? Among historians and social scientists, definitions of and approaches to political history have diverged immensely, and continue to do so. In this course, students explore recent approaches relevant to the history of politics and discuss the ongoing conceptualization of politics and the political, as well as its consequences for methods and the study of source material. What is the current state of the art in both early modern and modern political history, and what remains to be explored?

Participants in this course will learn at RMA level:

- How to define and analyze recent key concepts and approaches in the history of politics and the political;
- How to evaluate political historical studies from a historiographical, theoretical and methodological perspective;
- How to employ key concepts in the analysis of sources for the study of the political history;
- How to discuss these matters with fellow students;
- How to write a paper in which these topics are further developed

The course will be taught in Dutch or English (depending on the language skills of the participants).

We ask that students prepare questions, discussion points and analytical commentary on the readings and the discussion papers of the week. Participation will not be graded, but if you cannot make it to class, you are asked to notify the teaching staff well in advance.

More details about the program will be mailed to you in January.

C.2 Back to the Source: Archival Research in the Digital Age

Supervisors: dr. Carla Hoetink (Radboud University; RSPH Director of Studies), dr. Marijke van Faassen, dr. Rik Hoekstra and dr. Marijn Koolen (Huygens Institute)

Course period: March-April 2025

Location: Amsterdam

Credits: 5 ECTS (3 is optional)

Registration: before 15 January 2025 (bureau@onderzoekschoolpolitiekegeschiedenis.nl)

Course description and learning goals

Long gone are the days when political history was only described from official state documents. In today's historical practice, a great deal of attention is paid to multi-perspectivity, seeking opportunities to hear different voices. No one doubts the relevance of looking beyond the text and incorporating visual, auditory and material sources. In addition, new approaches and rapidly developing digital techniques shed fresh light on classical sources and open different possibilities for organizing, analysing and presenting sources on a larger scale. What does this mean for writing political history today?

In this course, students develop a broad view of the potential of resources to analyse the history of politics and the political. Students also learn to critically reflect on the limitations of various types of sources, archives, and datasets, and to recognize their 'political' nature. What were the roles of e.g. the state and social movements in collecting and archiving materials? What blank spots does this leave in the archives and analyses? Although Dutch archives are the starting point of this course, the literature and methodological analogue and digital skills are universally applicable.

Participants in this course will:

- Gain insight into a range of sources relevant to study political history;
- Reach a next level in source critique;
- Get acquainted with new technologies to access, comprehend, analyze and manage primary sources relevant to political historians;
- Obtain the skills to use various primary sources – both physical and digital – and apply methods in a sound way.

The course will be taught in Dutch or English (depending on the language skills of the participants).

Requirements

- Specific requirements TBA
(you may expect weekly preparations, active participation, written reflections and a presentation to be part of the assessment)

C.3 Summer School: 'When people (think they) have a choice'. From articulation to mobilization

Supervisors: Prof. dr. Peter van Dam, dr. Bram Mellink and dr. Mart Rutjes (University of Amsterdam)

Dates: 24-27 June 2025

Location: University of Amsterdam

Credits: 5 ECTS (3 is optional)

Description and learning goals

The history of politics starts wherever people mobilize, organize, and empower themselves, to change existing power structures. The conviction that a situation - previously understood as given - can be altered provides the starting point for attempts to acquire and exercise power. Such processes of politicization are often equated with 'politics from below' but take place in every realm of society, from the offices of bureaucrats and the newsrooms of media outlets to birthday parties and local discussion groups. But who is being challenged? How do they move from articulating a challenge to organization? And how do they realize their own visions?

The Summer School 'When people (think they) have a choice' examines politics, not as an autonomous sphere, but as a dimension of society at the crossroads of political and social history, focusing on three aspects of 'the political': articulations of choice, (self-) organization and the ways in which power is challenged, acquired and exercised. Political history thus becomes a history of processes of challenging and acquiring power, focusing on processes rather than outcomes.

After completing this summer school, you are able to

- Offer a conceptual and theoretical reflection on politics as a process of politicization
- Find and select sources and methods to explore a globally informed European history

The course will be taught in Dutch or English (depending on the language skills of the participants).

Requirements

- Specific requirements: TBA
You may expect weekly preparations, active participation, written reflections and a presentation to be part of the assessment.

Mission Statement Research School Political History

The objectives of the Research School Political History are:

Promoting the quality of research and (inter)national cooperation*

Providing high quality training for PhD candidates and Research Master (RMA) students, the next generation in political history*

Providing a platform for and representation of political historians in the Netherlands and Flanders*

The Research School Political History is member of the Association for Political History

<https://onderzoekschoolpolitiekegeschiedenis.nl/>

<https://www.associationforpoliticalhistory.org/>

bureau@onderzoekschoolpolitiekegeschiedenis.nl